SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

Continuing Education Encore Events

Transcript of

"Beyond Its Use -By Date? Pondering the Future of Faith"

> presented on July 14 , 2018 by Reverend Richard Lennan

[MUSIC PLAYING]

Dr. Colleen Griffith: Good morning.

Participants: Good morning.

Dr. Griffith:

human experience deeply, and shape historical agency. One who seeks truth in this way does so best by abiding in it, which is why life in the Spirit is the heart of the vocation of the theologian.

The 20

th century spiritual giant, Evelyn Underhill, has lots to say about life in the Spirit. She identifies interior di spositions and habits to be cultivated that characterize it. Focused attention, singleness of heart, openness to patterns of contemplation, adoration of God as one's interior bearing, and cooperation with God's creative Spirit in the world.

Our speaker th is morning approaches the theological task formed by these very d.6()-11.48.6(l)-1()0.6(f)eTc 0gTw 193(teaching, and preaching inspire, challenge, and give reason for hope.

> -Newcastle since 1983, is professor of Richard Lennan, a priest of the diocese of Maitland systematic theology in the School of Theology and Ministry at Boston College. His principal fields of research and teaching are ecclesiology and the theology of ministry. He has particular interest in the theology and spirituality of Karl Rahner.

He holds a master of philosophy degree from the University of Oxford and a doctorate in theology from the University of Innsbruck. He is the author of two books, The Ecclesiology of Karl Rahner and Risking the Church: The Challenge of Catholic Faith. He's the editor of five others, most recently, The Holy Spirit: Setting the World on Fire, which he cowith Nancy Pineda - Madrid and published with Paulist Press in 2017.

edited

Prior to moving to Boston, Richard taught theology for 15 years at the Catholic Institute of Sydney, and had wide involvement in ecumenical activities and pastoral planning in

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

Austral ia and New Zealand. He is past president of the Australian Catholic Theological Association, and serves currently as an editorial consultant for theological studies.

Richard is a most respected scholar, teacher, a trusted leader, and an esteemed colleague in our school. He has served as chair of the Ecclesiastical Faculty and is presently coordinator of the Systematics area and director of the STL program.

Those of you who have encountered Richard firsthand, know of his concern for his students and collea gues alike, expressed in countless generous actions on their behalf. Ladies and gentlemen, it is a great pleasure to welcome to this stage somebody that we celebrate regularly at the STM and do so especially today. Richard Lennan, addressing "The Future of Faith."

Rev. Richard Lennan: Good morning.

Participants: Good morning.

Fr. Lennan:

I am so delighted to be here. And for that, I particularly thank Melinda and the people with whom she works, for the invitation and for the care that they took in organizing all the details for this morning. I thank Jackie Regan and Marcia Ryan for organizing the alumni gathering earlier. And I'm most grateful to Colleen for that very gracious introduction. And thank you all for being here. I appreciate tha t. Giving up a sunny Saturday morning in the middle of summer is not done lightly, so it's wonderful that you're here.

Do you support the use of torture? This question featured in the recent confirmation hearing for the nominee to head the CIA. While the brutality of waterboarding would seem to leave no room for equivocation, the nominee was evasive. Sidestepping the demand for a yes or no answer, she would say only that "the CIA acted within the law."

While fruitless if measured by the light shed on the nominee's values, the exchange established at least one thing indisputably: direct questions do not always receive direct answers.

By now you may be ahead of me, wondering whether "Beyond Its Use -By Date?", itself a direct question, will receive a direct response. In fact, you may already be anticipating an hour of ducking and weaving along the lines of, well, look, it all depends on what you mean by "beyond" — [LAUGHTER] —by "use -by," and come to think of it, perhah5(i)-11.2(n)-1.5(k(")-6,p)0.6(l)-()0.6(d)-80.6

Boston College SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

"Ponde ring," I'd want to underscore —and here's an instance of a distinction —differs from

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

Since God always remains "Other" than us, our talk about God, no matter who we are or what our convictions, can never say the final word about God. Even less can any of us assert legitimately that we've said the only possible word about God.

Todkeh2tolgleth(er,)the(intex)2.0/5Jiohnson and Williams suggest the need for humility in24(h)0.5(e)0.6(9i 421.2 2.5(0.6(f)4)-11

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

As a step towards providing the light and shade that will enable a fuller portrait of faith and its possibilities for the future, I'll move to the second part of this paper, which will revi the contemporary context of faith.

ew

As I mentioned at the beginning of this lecture, the issues influencing the state of faith in the present day are many and intricate. In addition, what applies in one part of the world might not be significant in othe rs, so it would be more accurate to speak of multiple contemporary contexts of faith. Both of those factors have influenced how this section will develop. Rather than list individual issues, I'll analyze three sets of influences significant for the prospec ts of faith in today's world, sets that I'll gather under one overarching idea.

Although this material will reflect the prevailing situation in North America, it will have resonances in other settings as well. My approach will make everything far more nea orderly than reality can ever be, but it enables an overview of all that the practice in t and

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

church of the people. That failure fuels the sense that the Church is a remote institution, privilege of its leaders rather than to being a committed to its own continuance and the venue for an encounter with the merciful God, an encounter in which all believers can share unconditionally.

When these obstacles to a Church able to reflect the expansiveness of God are compounded by the pe ttiness and mediocrity to which clericalism is prone and by the impact of clerical sexual abuse, a cascade of ecclesial dislocation results. Equally, since that change in the Church is unlikely, even impossible, tends to harden ecclesial dislocation, leaving little hope for the future.

More could be said about the dynamics of ecclesial dislocation, but 25

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

Boston College SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

a playground, and the children who had a fence around them were more likely to explore outward than the children who were placed in the playground without a fence. So they huddled together and kind of stayed in their own confines. So my question is, especially with regard to the ecclesial dislocation and being a 9.6(i)() 0-ite r $9(,)6(9.68 \text{ re } f^*/C(i)-(e)2(k.6c)(() 0.J 0.004wD5)2.6(n)-1 [(continuous continuous con$

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

Now whether —because as Catholics, we had this sense of what we used to be like, but that doesn't mean that that was necessar ily a good thing. We have to learn to see our past not as black and white, but full of all sorts of complexities, just as our future will be and just as our present is.

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AND MINISTRY

institution that we grew up wi th, and the history and the culture and everything that makes us who we are minus the things that we want to leave behind.

So I guess I just ask in the tension of belonging: belonging, suffering, enduring, and being prophetic. It's a tough combination, an d I would just like to hear what you have to say about that.

Fr. Lennan: Okay, thank you. First, I wouldn't in any way minimize the difficulty. I recognize the struggle that you're describing, and I recognize that that's a struggle for many, many people in our Church. And in a very particular way, for women in our Church. No question about that.

I think it's got to be something more than sheer endurance, because that's hardly life giving. It's hardly a reflection of what the Spirit is enabling. The great big picture is that what enables us to continue to hope for change, for that discernment of hearing voices of